Principal Alex VerHusen and the teachers of the Torrance elementary school had the honor of entertaining the Harbor Section of the Los Angeles Elementary Principal's Club Tuesday evening, Oct. 20. Twenty-three principals were present who used the time before dinner was served to inspect the grounds and building. They were unanimous in declaring that the school is a model building as well as a beautiful one. Other items of interest and envy to the visitors were the well-equipped cafeteria, lunch rooms, and extra rooms for harmonica bands and glee clubs.

The dinner was prepared by Mrs. Smythe, cafeteria manager, and served by five girls from the special school under the direction of Mrs. Dalton. The rooms and halls were decorated by Mrs. Boehme, Mrs. Young and Mrs. Bradford. The very amusing favors were made by Mrs. Hilda Powell who received a big hand when introduced to the guests.

PARIS. (UP.)—Winter coats will be plain and tailored this year. For sports or street wear, they will be of simple cut with little or no fur trimming.

Many of the coats, always full length rather than three-quarter, are finished with small shoulder capes of the same material.

One, two and even three of the graduated shoulder length capes are shown on black and brown winter coats, while the high necks are usually finished with small turn-over collars. These strictly tailored coats are fitted at the waist and often belted in leather or suede, while the skirts are cut with a definite flare.

For afternoon or informal evening wear, there are many broadcloth coats shown with a trimming of shaved lamb, astrakhan of silver fox. These coats follow the 1936 silhouette by moulding the body closely to the knees, then flaring to the hem.

Fur collars can be of almost any shape. High round collars are shown on most of the new coats although great bow knots of fur, or flat applied pieces of fur trim the necks of many coats. Some of the dressier coats are without fur collars and cuffs but have wide bands of fur a few inches above the hem line.

Rich velvets and broadcloths are used for evening wear and these coats are lavishly trimmed with furs and the most expensive furs are smartest. Many evening coats are entirely of fur with ermine, mink, sable and silver fox most popular. Ermine dyed black is also shown a great deal.

Townsend Club Meets Tonight

Many visitors were noted among the large crowd which turned out to the meeting of the Townsend Club held last Thursday evening at the Torrance elementary school auditorium. Pep songs added a lively note, and this feature is regularly included in the meetings.

Club Women Study Issues On Ballot

National Business and Professional Women will exercise their privilege to vote in the November election, and it is the aim of every club president to see that the measures on the ballot appear in their true light to club members.

Torrance club held their dinner meeting in Daniel's Cafe Monday evening. As their after-dinner speaker, Mrs. Margaret Holcomb, prominent woman attorney and active club worker, took each measure as it appears on the ballot, giving the favorable side of the question and then pointing out any disadvantages. Of special interest to the Torrance ladies was article 24 dealing with city charters. Should a city want a charter they may vote for it and for the free holders to draw up the charter at the first election. Thus saving the cost of the second.

Four Members

Four new members added to the club roll at Monday's meeting were Miss Margy Huber, Miss Florence Perovich, Miss Thelma Dooley and Mrs. Cora M. Ellwood. Twenty-five attended the dinner and joined in singing songs of long ago. They were led by Madame Teala Billini, who also played the accompaniment.

Activities of Girl Scouts Are Told At Convention Last Week

CINCINNATI. (UP)—Mrs. Herbert Hoover, re-elected national president of the Girl Scouts at the 22nd annual convention, last Friday reviewed progress made by the organization during the year.

She announced that the membership had increased 15,310. The greatest percentage of growth, 12.3, was in the Pacific coast states.

All of the 12 regions into which the Girl Scouts divide the United States reported a good camping season, according to Mrs. Hoover. The 28 camps in the Big Tree region (Pacific coast) were filled to capacity, and Camp Chaparral in the California redwoods was overflowing. In the Covered Wagon region, which includes Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas, Missouri and Colorado, a rise in the demand for camping overtaxed the organization's facilities.

Dixie Region Active

Despite drought, disease and heat waves, the Dixie region, which includes Mississippi, Alabama, Arkansas, Tennessee and Louisiana, had 1,200 girls in the established camps, 1,000 in day camps and more than 1,000 in troop camps. More than 1,000 camps, of which 146 were new, were in operation throughout the country, the campers numbering more than 100,000.

"All the camps maintain standards set by national headquarters," Mrs. Hoover said, "and each region has its own system of inspection. In the Rocky Mountain region, which includes Montana, Idaho, Wyoming and Utah, the chairman of the regional camp committee traveled more than 5,000 miles to visit seven camps, all of which were between five and eight thousand feet above sea level."

Mrs. Hoover told how the Girl Scout program is penetrating to the more remote sections of the country, and what means the organization takes to keep in touch with isolated or "lone" troops.

Penetrate Kentucky Mountains

"In the Kenoswa region, for example, which includes Kentucky, Ohio and West Virginia, troop consultants are planning to visit regularly the 18 troops scattered thru the Kentucky mountains and others in the coal fields," Mrs. Hoover said. "The Great Lakes region, which includes Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan, gives continuous help to its seven hundred lone troops by a system of special advisors, who visit, advise and help the troops and find leaders."

In the Cactus region, which includes Oklahoma, Texas, Arizona and New Mexico, scouting for Indian girls has made great progress in 1936, according to Mrs. Hoover. Two new camps, specially for Indian girls, are being planned at Tahlihan, Okla., and in the Apache Indian reservation in Arizona, while the Girl Scout program is being used at Crowpoint Indian school on the Navajo reservation in New Mexico, to teach the girls home economics, Mrs. Hoover said.

Community service, in the opinion of the Girl Scout president, is one of the most valuable activities in the program, not only for the community benefited but also for the Girl Scout herself.

"Last spring," Mrs. Hoover said, "the Girl Scouts were able, because of their training, to give prompt and practical assistance during the floods. In Region III, which includes Pennsylvania, Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia, the girls helped to prepare and serve 784 meals in one town alone."

"In other towns affected they washed dishes, cared for babies and assisted in the improvised hospital wards for refugees. In the New England states they shared the relief burden by sorting and collecting garments, serving hot meals and distributing supplies to refugees."

In New York and New Jersey, which makes up the Hendrik Hudson region, community service took the form in some towns of helping during National Safety Week, National Hospital Day and National Garden Week. Mrs. Hoover reported. In New York City the Girl Scouts cooperated with the board of education and the park department
